In Search of Agreement

The conference convening in Washington this week to explore possibilities of international security is composed of gentlemen presumably in search of agreement. Their problem—and the problem of all future conferences on the same subject—is how to reconcile conflicting aims and interests for the common purpose of securing world stability. Unless all of them see it that way, their meeting is a mockery.

After World War I, the nations failed in this momentous project. They found too many irreconcilable conflicts. Too many of the agreements they reached on a basis of theory were blown sky-high on a basis of practice. The conferees did not all honestly mean what they said. They were unable to make their decisions binding on future governments operating under changed circumstances. The bickering that occurred in the conferences ultimately became bickering between nations, and the agreements to agree that were not founded on sincerity ultimately were disregarded as the nations moved inexorably toward a showdown of their conflicting purposes in war.

It is charged sometimes that the American people are naive about the realities of international relations. To the extent that they take upon themselves too large a share of the blame for the difficulties that have been encountered in practice since World War I, this is true. No matter how blameless America's purposes may be, America cannot secure peace without like purposes elsewhere. This nation merely can use its influence in behalf of what it holds to be right, in the hope of maintaining peace—and thereafter if peace is not maintained it must stand ready to accept the consequence of failure, which is war. That has happened twice in a generation. Nothing is more certain than that it will happen again unless the exploratory conference now beginning and the definitive conferences to follow are blessed with real agreement.

John Foster Dulles

Gov. Dewey's designation of John Foster Dulles, his chief adviser on international affairs, to confer in his behalf with Secretary of State Hull, on the latter's invitation, is a reassuring move. It changes what might have been a political tiff into a gesture of cooperation.

Credit is due to Secretary Hull for inviting Gov. Dewey to confer with him, after the governor's public questioning of the aims of the conference on post-war international plans convening this week in Washington. Further credit belongs to Gov. Dewey for accepting the invitation and naming the man who probably would become secretary of state if he were elected consult with the secretary of state in President Roosevelt's cabinet. This confirms Gov. Dewey's pledge that he will place heavy responsibility, if elected, upon members of his cabinet; he has given Mr. Dulles the prestige of going to Washington to make a visit which would be of great importance if Mr. Roosevelt failed in his bid for reelection. Potentially, it is an opportunity to secure continuity of foreign policy in the event of a change of administration.

Mr. Dulles is known as the international scholar of the Dewey team, an expert whose activities have kept him continuously informed throughout a lifetime. Secretary Hull has given good service to his known conviction that foreign policy should not become a partisan issue. He has gone out of his way to inform the opposition of his own objectives. The public is gratified at this manifestation of cooperation.

Next Moves

Any attempt to follow the rapid developments of the expanding second front in France leads inevitably to speculation on next moves. One of these moves, which had been a favorite speculation for many weeks—the invasion of France from the Mediterranean—has been taken. Another is invasion of the Balkans, opposite Italy. Still another is the probability that sooner or later the Allies may proceed directly against German forces massed on the Channel coast between Le Havre and the Netherlands.

The obvious strategy of the campaign in France is the destruction of German fighting power. The object is not primarily to reach Berlin, but to eliminate the German strength which stands between the Allies and the German capital. A large part of that strength is still intact in the low countries. It is chiefly manifest at present in the robot bomb attacks on England. The threat of greater and more destructive attacks by some other "secret weapon" resides in it. For the time being it is a paradox that the Allies are on the verge of liberating Paris, but have been unable to lift the siege of London.

Another speculation, being kept active by hints of German preparations against chemical warfare, concerns the probability that Germany will add gas warfare to its arsenal of weapons in the near future. It would be a last resort and would not turn the tide of defeat, but it would take a heavy toll of life and might stave off the hour of doom a little while.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, August 22

A definite show of opposing forces and conditions may add perplexity and surprise to the events of this day. While there may be signs of crystallization, delay and static situations yet there is a powerful uprooting force, radical and far reaching. Shrewd and capable management of such conflicts may result in astonishing denouement, affecting the business as well as domestic or romantic matters. With controlled impulses and emotions, and with sturdy application and good sense, lasting foundation may be laid upon the ruins of devastation and upheaval.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of surprises and upheavals with a spading up of old static and crystallized conditions and situations. With good reasoning and sturdy application to the tenacious obstructions it is probable that sound and enduring benefits may be reaped. This applies to finances, property and to all domestic and affectional relations. But impulsive and emotional conduct might prove disintegrating. Work to preserve solid foundations built upon radical change or promising spawdwork, in home and in business.

A child born on this day may be original, independent, having fine skills and ingenuity, with firmness and dependability of character. It may suffer in its affectional life.

Snags In Civilian Production

By Ann Stevick

News Washington Correspondent

Experts around WPB aren't giving definite odds on what goods for the home folks are off to the best start now that WPB chief Donald Nelson has given the go-ahead.

But among the 79 items, running from outboard motors to pen nibs and domestic watt-hour meters, now free from wartime material restrictions if manufacturers can get going without interfering with anybody's war work, there are a number of homey things you may be counting on which are certain to be held up by obscure bugs in the reconverted production line.

Take fishing tackle. That's on the list of items which manufacturers can now make on a catch-as-catch-can basis. No doubt some types of tackle will be forthcoming, but certain vital flies, lures and other fisherman's gear take fine yarn. Fine yarn is something even the Army hasn't been able to get enough of without practically putting yarn looms under martial law.

Cast-iron ware manufacturers are on WPB's list of those invited to get going without restrictions. That makes it nice, but WPB industry counselors point out that War Manpower Commission is whacking the of labor goes into cast-iron ware. Therefore, WMC bushes for forge and foundry workers. The same type isn't likely to certify readily to make pots and pans. Some thing goes for alarm clocks which are on the free list. There won't be many of the highly trained, precision skilled workers necessary until more cutbacks appear in military instruments using the same labor.

Electrical appliances, a term which takes in such fond memories as toasters and fans, can now be made with abandon as far as WPB restrictions go. Abandon, however, won't do for copper wire, as essential which is still painfully short.

Galvanized ware like garbage cans, coal hods, pails and buckets are free to go, too. But facilities for rolling the metal are likely to be going full tilt for some time on military orders.

Electric refrigerators and washing machines didn't even get on the list, because of scarce components like fractional motors. Vacuum cleaners, which also require motors, are on by grace of a production quick. Vacuum cleaner manufacturers usually make their own motors. Large volume refrigerator and washing machine makers are more likely to farm theirs out. Therefore vacuum cleaners get first go-ahead, because they'll get under way on a self-reliant basis, although makers expect it to take some time to assemble enough materials to get into action.

Simple trinkets are the only ones which are in the clear for sure. Immediate production of hair pins, bob pins, perhaps fountain pens and mechanical pencils, small loose-leaf parts for binders is expected. In spite, however, of the generally gloomy Gus aspect, nobody wants to say what U. S. industry can do in a pinch. Manufacturers have had hard wartime training in reversing their field on sight of an obstacle. They may come through with unknown plays for unexpected scores on new toasters or refrigerators.

CHAPTER NINE

Matthew said, laughing at his mother over Irene's fair head, "Like my taste in office nurses?"

"She's perfect," Mary agreed. "Oh, I forgot to tell you, Judith Lambert is coming for dinner."

"Good!" exclaimed Matthew. "What a brat she was, always tagging at my heels! It's a good thing you brought me up to be a gentleman, despite myself. I used to yearn to smack her."

"Judith?" asked Irene, looking from one to the other.

Mary explained. She said, to her son, "I think you'll find her rather changed. If anyone is doing the tagging now—and I imagine there are many—it isn't Judith."

The bell rang. "There she is," said Mary.

"Thank the Lord," murmured Matthew piously. "I'm starved. Which reminds me that I want to see Nellie. Are you sure she doesn't mind the switch, mother?"

"She's delighted."

Mary went out to the hall to meet Judith, and Irene sat down on a big hassock by the fireplace. A strand of hair fell over her eyes and she pushed it back. Baby-fine hair such as hers wouldn't hold a dinner wad and a permanent made her look like a Fiji islander. She was very conscious of her fatigue. The time since her marriage had been difficult . . . trying to adjust herself emotionally to Matthew's demands, keeping up her work at the hospital, conscious that she must not sacrifice an iota of it to Matthew.

Judith came in and Mary presented her. How pretty she is, thought Irene without envy. She was that rare woman, one who could admire another's attractions without jealousy or reservation.

Matthew came barging in and his mother said, "Really, Matthew, if you enter a sickroom like that you'll shock your patient into unconsciousness." But that was how he was made, big, exuberant, dominant, like a strong wind from the sea.

"Not Judith!" he exclaimed in mock consternation. "Never Judith! What in the world have you done to yourself?"

Judith gave him her hand, said "Ouch," and withdrew it. She replied modestly, "Oh, just put on a few pounds in the right places and taken them off in the wrong. Also I no longer wear braces and—"

He said with delight, "You're a knockout!" He took her left hand and looked at it. "What?" he demanded, "no slave symbol? The West Coast men must be very remiss."

"I'm waiting for someone just like you," Judith retorted, "but I doubt if there are two of you in the world."

"Of course not." He went to stand beside Irene, and for a moment laid his hand on the top of her head. "Too bad you didn't come around earlier," he told Judith, "before I was bespoken."

Kate came in with the cocktails and appetizers and Mary engaged Judith in a conversation about Maine, Boston, the Fellows, and the trip back to the coast. Irene drank her cocktail and relaxed a little. The nerve tension in her neck lessened. Sometimes she had it quite badly, but if Matthew was with her he could always coax it away with his firm, searching hands.

"Tired, baby?" he murmured. "No, not a bit," she said brightly. He was never tired, and it irritated him in the most curious way if she was—although he always asked.

Judith thought: He's better looking than I remembered him. She had forgotten how gray his eyes were, darker than his mother's, brighter, and how his hair curled. He had hated that, years ago. She had forgotten his hands and his shoulders and that arrogant air of almost superhuman well-being that surrounded him. It was like a challenge, and her own spirits rose to meet it. She stood beside him, her glass in hand, and Irene, looking at them, thought: They make a marvelous couple.

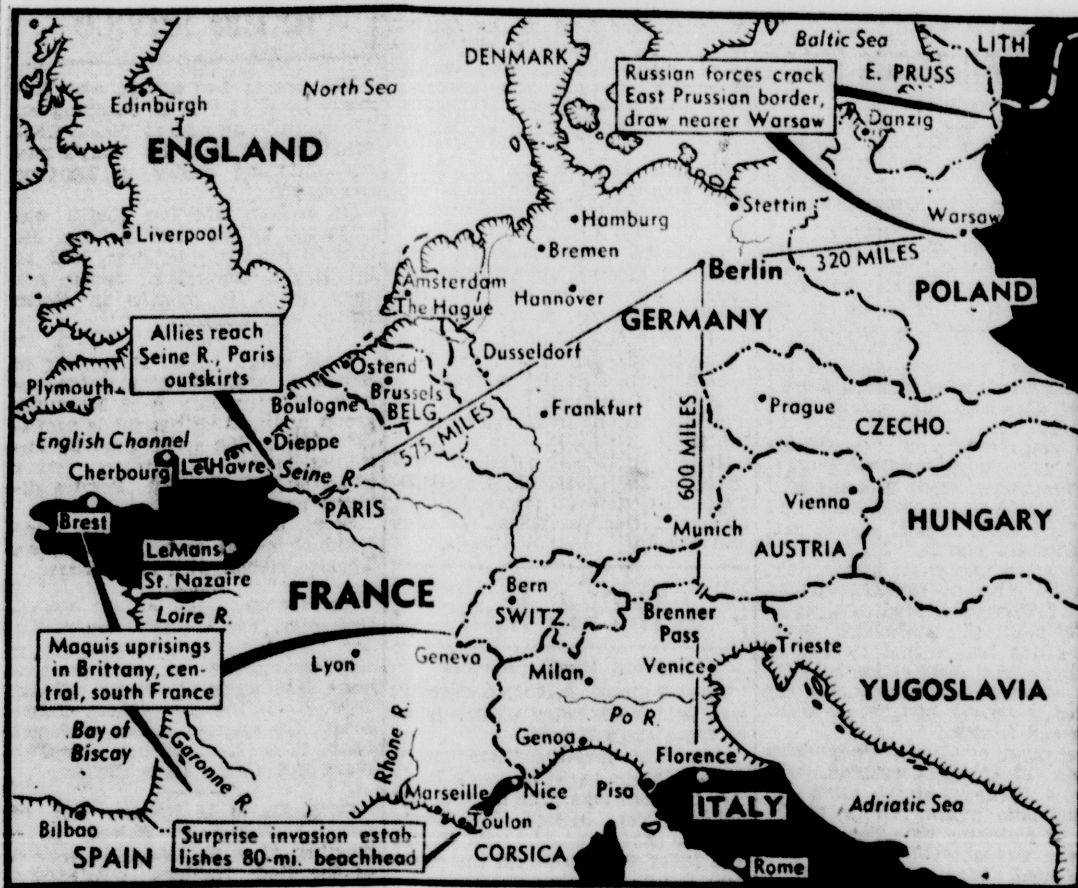

Matthew set down his glass. His mother cried, "Matthew, my table!" and shrugged. She added resignedly to Irene, "You'll spend the rest of your life picking up after him. I have never been able to fathom how a person as clean as Matthew can be so untidy. My life has been one long battle to save table tops from glass rings; it began with milk and has progressed to highballs; upholstery from cigarette burns, and the floor from just plain litter."

"How the woman talks," said Matthew, "as if she didn't love it!"

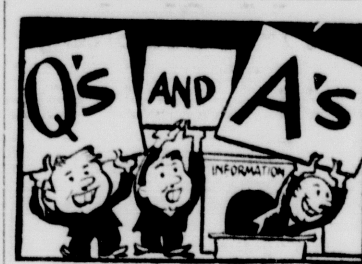

"I'm learning," Irene told her mother-in-law, smiling, as Kate came in to announce dinner.

LOTTERY FOR LIFE! THAT'S ROTATION PLAN FOR MEN WITH 37TH IN SOUTH PACIFIC

WITH THE 37TH INFANTRY in the Southwest Pacific—When you speak of an "eligible" man on this island you don't mean a bachelor with a southern exposure foxhole, an extra pair of dry fatigues, a $500 Samaritan sword, and rows of ribbons and medals.

An "eligible" here is one who has qualified for home leave by two years overseas service. Each month the division is given a quota and drawings are held. The quota is small. Only a few hundreds out of the thousands eligible win leaves.

Each company holds its own drawing. Some are held so close to Japanese who still live and fight that guards must be posted. Some are held just back of the barbed wire of the final protective line, and some are held in Red Cross huts and orderly rooms in the rear echelons.

But the atmosphere is the same. Emotions are as mixed as a ration box on a drink.

Some men stand quietly, others walk around clearing their throats. Many refuse to attend. Men offer 20, 30, 40 and 50 to one they won't be drawn, their voices betraying the hope they'll lose their bets. Men take refuge in games, but keep runners on the outskirts of the crowd. Men hide in their tents, wash their clothes, sun their blankets, do anything to avoid being there when the colonel's hand dips in the bucket.

Avoid, But Not of Enemy

Nervous or jittery, they ache for home.

They had sailed out more than two years ago. They hadn't seen an American girl, they hadn't tasted a cocktail, they hadn't slept in a bed, and they hadn't heard any voice kinder than that of a sergeant. There were men with babies at home they had never seen, men whose parents had died, men whose homes had burned down, men, who thousands of miles away from their homes had undergone all the domestic hardships that are supposed to be tough, even when a man is there to face it and handle it.

The men all were afraid of distance and time.

They weren't afraid of the enemy. They had trained on a steaming South Pacific island; had waded in at New Georgia and taken it despite hell, high water, and the Japanese; had gone on to Bougainville and fought man to man in the jungle. They had killed the nip at the ratio of 30 to one.

They had fought the jungle, which is worse than the Japs.

But they were afraid of time and distance.

"Damn, it, a man needs civilization once in a while," said Sgt. Jim Smith of Cleveland Heights, O., as he waited. It does something to a man not to see the light of a town, drug stores, chain stores, street cars, houses, American people.

There was a draw for headquarters company.

Typical Drawing Held

The coconut hut benches—in a clearing the Japanese had provided with some "daisy cutter" artillery shells—were filled an hour ahead.

Capt. Ralph Westfall of Fort Collins, Col., explained that two privates were to be drawn from the 49 eligibles; two privates from 47, one from 37; three buck sergeants from the first two grades out of 14. He dumped in the names of the privates. Warrant Officer David H. Brill of R. D. 1, Quaker City, O., shook the box. The captain stuck an arm in the box.

He started calling names. "Private C. L. Kendrick."

C. L. Kendrick, of Spray, N. C., jumped in the air, saluted three times, howled like a banshee, and streaked toward his quarters shouting.

The name of Aloysius Wilhelm was then drawn. This Toledo citizen passed Pvt. Kendrick before the first banyan tree was reached. From then on out the clearing was like a hoe-down in Mississippi. Buck sergeants lost their dignity and shook hands with 5-3s. First sergeants forgot their stripes and temporarily became human beings.

Men were going back to the United States of America.

Men were so happy they made little sense.

And the hundreds and the thousands whose names weren't drawn walked back to their holes in the ground and settled down to hope until the next draw.

These men don't know the true facts. Do you?

REMARKS like these are not uncommon. Perhaps you've heard them made by your friends and neighbors—men and women whom you rightly consider good American citizens, upright and thoroughly well-intentioned. You wouldn't think of questioning their patriotism, either.

Yet, on this matter of gasoline rationing, such remarks mean just one of two things: Misunderstanding, or lack of correct information.

You, as a motorist, have so much at stake in this matter of the nation's gasoline supply that you certainly should know the true facts. And we of the Petroleum Industry have so much at stake that we are bound to give them to you with utmost frankness.

This, then, is the true situation:

There is not plenty of gasoline—not even here in the Central States.

Our armed forces get first call on the nation's gasoline supply, of course. Their needs are tremendous—have been growing steadily greater month by month since we entered the war—will, undoubtedly, increase still further in the months to come. Huge as these military needs are, they're being met—and will be.

When that is done, however, there just isn't enough gasoline left over to permit civilian motorists to drive "as usual." Fortunately, there is enough to give everybody some gasoline, if—if it can be shared fairly, and only if it is so shared.

That's why there must be rationing, and that's why it's to your own personal, selfish interest to help make rationing work. If it doesn't work, somebody is going to go without any gasoline—it could be you.

Furthermore, in the critical months to come, if our present system of gasoline rationing fails, much more drastic measures for control will be imposed—that you can depend on. Don't let it happen!

How you can help make gas rationing work: Don't apply for more gas than you really need. Get into a ride-sharing club and stick to it. Endorse all your gas coupons now—don't give any away. Don't take extra gas or coupons from anyone.

Bringing Up Baby In The Right Way

Prepared by the Staff of the Child Study Association of America, Inc.

AP Features

When they are tired, children naturally want to sleep. Your child may not be ready to sleep just when you think he should or wake up to suit your convenience. You can find out how much sleep he really needs and plan accordingly.

But most children fuss about going to bed at one time or another. Going to bed means being separated from the grownups and their fun. They will keep on calling you back, or asking for "another drink of water" just to keep your company.

It's a good idea to play quietly with your child for a while, just before bed-time, giving him all your attention. Tell him a few minutes ahead when it is time to go to sleep—and perhaps give him him to his room.

NATURAL LOOKING CURLS PERMANENT WAVE 59¢

Yes—it's true! You can now give yourself a marvelous permanent wave, coolly, comfortably, at home—easy as putting your hair up in curlers. The amazing Charm-Kurl PERMANENT WAVE KIT contains everything you need. Accept no substitutes, but insist on the genuine Charm-Kurl. Complete, only 59 cents—pay no more. Over 5 million sold. Safe for every type of hair. At J. H. Lease Drug Co., and all drug stores.

You naturally expect the door to his room to be closed when he sleeps, and if you close it quietly there will usually be no fuss. But if, for any special reason, he wants the door left open or a light left on in the hall, give him this comfort for a while. It may be enough for him to know that you are nearby in case he really needs you. Soon he will be ready to have the door closed again and he will tell you so himself when he feels that way.

Don't ever use going to bed as a punishment. This makes it something he doesn't like. Going to bed should be a pleasant thing to do.

"V-DAY" WILL END THE WAR IN EUROPE

Don't be surprised now if this BIGGEST NEWS the world has ever awaited comes this week, or next, or the next. The affairs of Mr. Hitler are fast approaching the end. When it does come, let's all celebrate SPONTANEOUSLY and with all the vigor that we can master.

The minute that Victory is announced in Europe will be just sixty seconds before this store will close its doors to spend the balance of the day in a fitting celebration of a world event that will go down in history as the greatest of all time.

We know that when the good news arrives, not an employee in this store can be held in leash—each and every one will break away to join with their relatives and friends in an all-out joyous celebration.

Therefore, we're telling you this news in advance—don't expect to do any business with us on "V DAY." We'll be closed and every employee will be out there on the street with you raising the roofs and going mad with the joy of a great weight lifted from off their very souls.

Athletics Nose Alliance Taylorcrafters, 6-5, In Extra Inning Yesterday

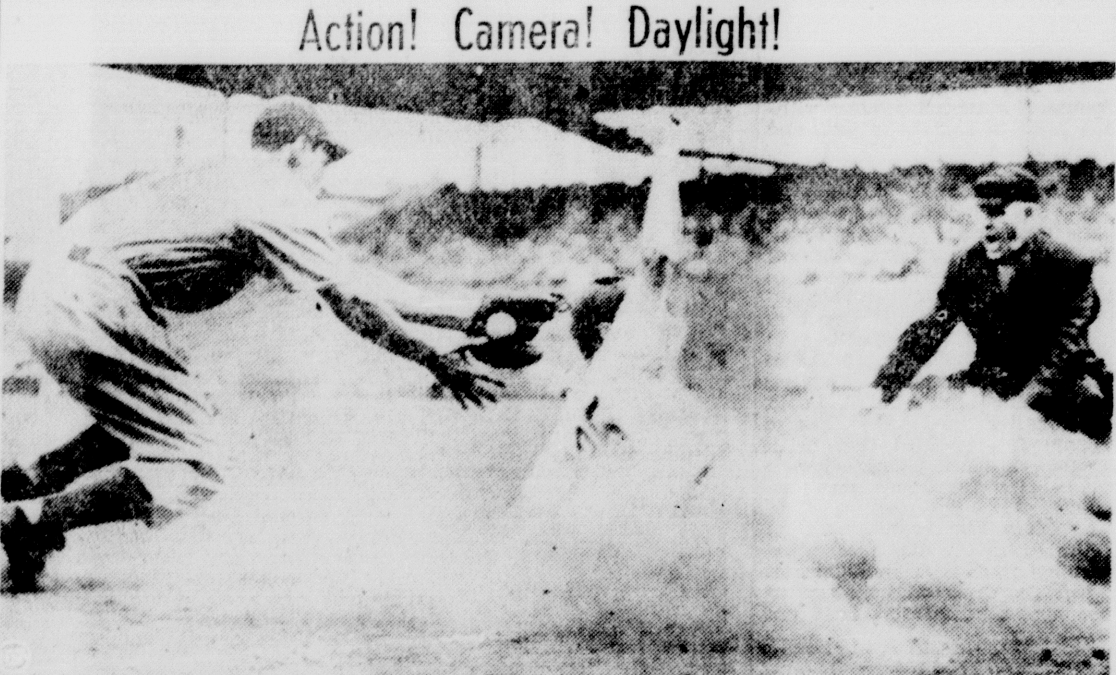

Although the Alliance Taylorcrafters garnered only four hits from Pitcher Allen, they managed to score five runs in seven innings and tie the ball game before the Salem Athletics could score again in the extra-inning to win, 6-5, at Centennial park yesterday afternoon.

Playing Alliance in the absence of the Canton Spikers, who had to cancel their game here because of tournament play in Canton, the Athletics added another win to their growing streak. It's been nearly two weeks now since the locals have been beaten and they will be out to continue their streak against the Beloit Shell Oils here Wednesday.

With their Sebring recruit, Frank Allen, on the mound yesterday against the Aviators, Salem fared well. In the first inning both squads collected a run and Salem added two in the second to go into the lead.

In the fifth inning, after three scoreless times at bat, Alliance broke loose with a two-run barrage and followed that with one run in each of the sixth and seventh frames. Salem scored a pair in the fifth and sixth and it was tied, 5-5, when the seven innings were over.

The extra frame ended things as the locals picked up a big tally and won, 6-5. Strong at "Dutch" Taylorcrafters, back in the lineup after a three week's absence, Taubler banged out three singles in four times at bat. Dale Ritchie slugged

Country's Best In His First Attempt

By RUSS NEWLAND
SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 21—He wasn't given much of a chance when the tournament opened, in fact was dismissed with the classification of a "comer," but Bob Hamilton carried the title of 1944 National P. G. A. golf champion on his name today.

The "darkhorse" from Evansville, Ind., 28 years old and playing in this tournament for the first time, defeated Byron Nelson, Toledo, O., 1 up over 36 holes yesterday. It was the No. 1 upset of the tournament, in fact the biggest reversal in 26 championships.

Demings Must Win Three For Honors

In order to clinch their hold on fourth round honors Demings, now unbeaten in four games, has three contests to win this, the final week of Class A softball for 1944.

Today Demings clash with Jim's, tomorrow with Paxsons and Thursday with the News. Should the Pump outfit lose one game, they will be forced to play off the round with the Salem China, the other team in the league with but one loss this season.

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
NEW YORK, Aug. 21—Looks as if the National Tennis championships at Forest Hills Labor day week-end will be strictly a feminine show. Lieut. Dan McNeill shouldn't have any competition for the men's title if he's in condition, but the odds don't favor him. The girls, on the other hand, have the slightest attention to form (that is, playing form) ... any one of a half dozen girls might win ... Softball fans will have a full evening of entertainment Friday night when the unbeaten Dover Shenango Steel Co. team meets the Salem China, bolstered by a picking of Class A best under the lights at Reilly stadium in a benefit contest being sponsored to raise money for the Booster club treasury.

A crowd of approximately 2,000 is expected to witness the clash, which will also feature a game between the Salem and Warren Mullins teams.

Career Of Fighter-Wrestler Paul Berlenbach Is Strange

BY BILLY ROCHE
There is no stranger career in boxing than that of Paul Berlenbach.

The Astoria Assassin was the only wrestler to win a world championship in the ring.

He was deaf and dumb from four to 13 years of age.

At 20 Berlenbach won the 1920 Olympic heavyweight wrestling championship in Antwerp.

A year later he acquired the National A. A. U. heavyweight boxing championship, yet would not fight when other New York taxi-cab drivers picked on him.

Berlenbach was a tremendous attraction, drew $952,000 in three starts with Jack Delaney, $416,000 in his last good fight, the one at Ebbetts Field in which he lost the title, July 16, 1926.

Dark-haired, blue-eyed Berlenbach, 5-10½, 170, stolid and slow-spoken, was as emotionless as an ox. He was fond of music, collected phonograph records.

He loved dogs, raised and bred Great Danes.

Berlenbach had an individual slugging style. He swung his heavy arms as though they were railroad ties, landing with paralyzing effect on his opponent's body. He was not a sharp puncher, and old Dan Hickey, boxing instructor of the New York Athletic Club, schooled him to punch to the body instead of the head.

Deaf and Dumb as Child

Berlenbach made up in sheer ponderosity of punching what he lacked in speed, was awkwardly clever in evading and blocking.

Scarlet fever contracted at four left Berlenbach deaf and dumb. He was sent to St. Joseph's Parochial school at Throg's Neck in the Bronx.

At 13 he came home for a

Paul Berlenbach rose like a sky-rocket and fell like the stick.

MINE RESCUE WORK IS HALTED AGAIN

Suspend Operations Temporarily To Regulate Air Entering Pit

(By Associated Press)
BELLAIRES, Aug. 21.—Rescue work was at a standstill again today at the Powhatan mine, where efforts to recover the bodies of 66 miners trapped by fire July 5 have been suspended to guard against an explosion.

Rescue workers who had been idle since Saturday, when the operations first were suspended, reported for duty this morning but were not permitted to enter the shaft because outside air continued to leak past barricades erected inside the entry to seal off the section where the underground fire is burning.

Officials said that due to a change in atmospheric pressure the oxygen content of the air within the mine was too high and the rescue work would be suspended until conditions improved.

The mixture of highly explosive methane gas and oxygen within the entry had not reached the danger point, the officials said, but they did not want to take unnecessary risks.

The seal was well inside that portion of the pit containing the bodies. Before ceasing work, rescue crews found two dinner pails, an engineer's transit and 39 loaded cans of coal near section seven left, where at least 27 men were known to have been working when the fire broke out.

The seals are erected by crews wearing gas masks every 300 to 400 feet as workers advance into the mine to permit gas-laden air to be pumped out. Officials said, however, 48 hours probably would be required to bring out the first bodies found because of the time necessary to ventilate the shaft.

AWARDS ARE MADE AS STATE LEGION RALLY CONTINUES

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Aug. 21.—Parade awards were passed out today as the Ohio American Legion's 26th annual convention swung into its second day.

The Franklin post band of Columbus was declared this year's outstanding marching band in yesterday's parade, which required 75 minutes to pass a reviewing stand in front of the statehouse. Canton's Legion band placed second.

Hundreds of veterans from World War I were joined by veterans of World War II, Legion auxiliary members and affiliated organizations in the colorful march.

Lt. Col. Raymond J. Kelley, past national commander of the American Legion, in an address last night called for adoption of measures to "strengthen our country—not as a military power, but as a peace-loving nation—against any force of greed and aggression which may develop in the future."

He also reminded listeners that the legion advocated compulsory military training for the nation's youth as a preparedness measure and that two bills to provide it were pending in congress.

Other parade awards included: Barnett post, Norwood, best drum and bugle corps, and Summit post, Akron, second; Barnett post, best marching band; and Iron post, second; ninth district (Cleveland), first place for best marching unit; Toledo's Sons of American Legion drum and bugle corps, first; and Clifton post, Lakewood, Sons of American Legion, second, for best Sons of Legion unit.

Clyde Irwin of Warren was named grand chef de garre by the Grand-volure D'Ohio of the 40th & 8th Herbert Wilson of Washington Court House was elected sous chef de train, Larry Garrison of Van Wert grand conductor, and A. J. Halloran of Springfield grand avocet.

Three drum majorettes were overcome by heat during closing moments of the parade. They were Dorothy Diehl, 16, and Jean Boydland, 14, both of Mansfield, and Ellen Campbell, 20, of Toledo.

FUTURE PEACE

secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr.

Both Hull and Cadogan sought to reassure small nations as to their position in the projected world agency. It was on this point that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential nominee, last week warned against Big-Power coercion.

"It cannot be emphasized too often," Hull said, "that the principle of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, irrespective of size and strength, as partners in a system of order under law, must constitute the foundation of any future international organization for the maintenance of peace and security."

Willkie Meeting Rests With Dulles

(By Associated Press)

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey left to John Foster Dulles, his foreign affairs deputy, today the task of attempting to reach a meeting of the minds with Wendell L. Willkie on international security problems while he turned his attention to the vote-collecting aspects of the presidential campaign.

The meeting in New York City today between Willkie, the party's 1940 presidential nominee, who has not said whether he will support Dewey, and Dulles, who may be the next secretary of state if the Republicans win in November, far overshadowed in public interest Dewey's latest advocacy of post-war internationalization of the rich Ruhr valley, the throbbing industrial heart of Germany.

In an exchange of telegrams with Dewey, Willkie said that while he would be glad to confer with Dulles, "I wish I had known of your desire for my views prior to your original statement."

He obviously alluded to Dewey's blast at reports that the four-power diplomatic conference opening today in Washington might be headed toward formation of a permanent military alliance that would dominate the world and deny small nations a voice in the future maintenance of peace.

Willkie said in his telegram that he had been assured 10 days ago by "Washington authorities" that the American government intends to insist on the protection of the position of small nations at the four-power conference. Dewey received similar public assurances from Hull.

Killed by Hit-Skipper

DELAWARE, Aug. 21.—Hugh Lee, 46, of Sycamore, was killed by a hit-skip motorist today while returning to his home after attending the American Legion convention in Columbus.
